A. General Information

Brief Description of Institution

National Tsing Hua University (NTHU) was first established in Beijing, China in 1911 and re-established in Hsinchu, Taiwan in 1956. On the 1st of November 2016, NTHU merged with the National Hsinchu University of Education (NHCUE).

NTHU is located in Hsinchu, a city 72 kilometers south of Taipei. The campus covers an area over 120.1678 hectares (296.94184 acres) of scenic land and is strategically situated among many prestigious research institutes and universities such as: the Industrial Technology Research Institute (ITRI), National Synchrotron Radiation Research Center, National Center for High-Performance Computing, Food Industry Research and Development Institute, National Chiao Tung University, Chung Hua University, and the Hsinchu Science-Based Industrial Park.

At present, NTHU consists of 13 colleges, 26 departments, 31 graduate institutes, as well as 12 bachelor's degree, 20 master's degree and 14 doctoral degree programs. The 12 colleges are: College of Science, College of Engineering, College of Nuclear Science, College of Humanities and Social Sciences, College of Life Sciences and Medicine, College of Electrical Engineering and Computer Science, College of Technology Management, College of Education, College of Arts, Tsing Hua College, Taipei School of Economics and Political Science, College of Semiconductor Research and College of Sustainability. As of the Fall Semester of 2024, NTHU employs 875 faculty members and enrolls 18,269 students, among them 9,307 are undergraduates, 7,301 in the master programs and 1,661 in the doctoral programs.

NTHU emphasizes interdisciplinary approach. In addition to upholding basic education, our undergraduate programs are designed to maximize flexibility as well as integration. Students are encouraged to cross disciplinary boundary to pursue their minor or double-major degrees programs.

To be admitted to NTHU's undergraduate program, most students need to pass the college entrance examination. Others with special qualifications, however, may be admitted through various admission schemes. International students can apply directly to the Office of Global Affairs.

For the master programs, student must have a baccalaureate degree and pass an entrance examination administered by various Institutes. Outstanding students may be directly admitted through a special and competitive selection process. The same is true for those wishing to be admitted to the doctoral programs.

There are 180 student clubs, each classified into nine categories: academic, skill-based, music, service-oriented, sports, art, general interest, student autonomous, and functional. The university has excellent recreational and sport facilities, such as gymnasium, swimming pools, various kinds of ball courts, track and field. There are, in addition, 25 student dormitories with a maximum capacity to house 8,438 students on our campus. Many faculty members also live on campus and creating an integrated university community where students and faculty members can interact outside of classrooms and laboratories.
